NAB MAIL BANDIT WITH LOOT

Ex-Convict Caught In Chicago Confesses Mail Robbery But Denies Killing Deputy Fisher

The Indiana Harbor mail robbery case and the shooting of Deputy Sheriff, Walter Fisher of Mokena, is getting many perplexing angles, the arrest of Daniel F. Hesley, 25 years old, ex-convict, in the Morrison hotel, Chicago, Tuesday with $12,000 of the mail loot on him and $25,000 hid away in a bank safety deposit box.

Practically all the loot has been recovered. Hesley had $12,000 of it in his room. In safety deposit boxes in the National Bank of the Republic and in a Park Ridge institute, according to the inspectors is $24,000 more. Mrs. Mary Hesley, mother of the man under arrest, turned over $300 to the authorities and several hundred more was found hidden in a barrel in the rear of her home in Park Ridge.

Chief Inspector Miller of the Chicago office, and Chief Birdseye of the Cincinnati office, adopted a ruse last Saturday to make Hesley believe they had gone off on a false clew and that he was safe with his fortune. They asserted a belief that Santos Calabrese, whose body was found bullet riddled in a ditch near Broadview, was the robber, and that he had been wounded in a duel with Deputy Sheriff Walter Fisher of Mokena near Orland. Fisher was shot to death.

The story fitted in many important details. Hesley had been in Joliet only a short time before the killing of the deputy. The announced theory was that Calabrese, supposed killer, fled to Chicago with his loot and was killed there by super-robbers preying on the original bandit.

Yesterday Chief Inspector Miller asserted that it was all a plan to deceive Hesley and that his men had already, at the time the theory was announced, fixed the crime on the ex-high school athlete.

The story as it stands now is that Frank Watson, driver of a truck hauling mail from the railroad station in Indiana Harbor to the postoffice, was halted by a car parked in an alley. From it stepped Hesley, with a revolver held under his coat. Workman on a building across the street, saw nothing of the drama.

Hesley forced Watson to show him the sacks containing the $37,000 intended for a pay roll of the Inland Steel company. These he took. Then he compelled Watson to get into his car and to drive. They headed for Joliet with Watson driving and the bandit on the rear seat with his revolver and his loot.

At a lonely spot, a stop was made and Hesley, with a razor blade, slit the sacks and took the currency, which was wrapped in small canvas bags. Then he ordered a resumption of the journey. Things moved along nicely until they reached the outskirts of Joliet, where the clutch on the car began to slip.

The bandit and his captive pushed it over a small rise and coasted down to a garage. There, while Hesley fumed and two mechanics tried to repair the car, Watson slipped away and telephoned for the police. The robber, becoming fearful, slipped away also and the mechanics were still working when the police arrived.

There is a bit of hiatus between that time 10 a. m. of Wednesday and late afternoon when the next clew the overturned cab driver—come to light.

It was impossible for Hesley, in the short time after he left the garage until the killing of Fisher, to reach the spot where the latter was shot. Who shot Fisher, the inspector explained, is a matter for the state authorities. Perhaps that man was Calabrese.

When Hesley reached Park Ridge he got into a taxicab. He told the driver to move around until he found a secluded spot. This took time and when Hesley at last ordered a halt in front of a deserted gas filling station the bill was $.75. The driver looked and saw him slit one of the canvas bags. Then he returned and presented a $10 bill, with the remark that the cabman keep the change.

Hesley went to his mother's home and the cabdriver, suspicious of his actions and the large tip, notified the police.

Postal inspectors interviewed Hesley's mother. She told them that he had money. She told them where he lived. A watch was kept on his home for several days, while inspectors sought the hiding places of the loot.

Tuesday they they located his caches. His home was raided. He and his wife had fled. Neighbors told where, to the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Anton Berinski, at 2912 West 40th place. When they were sought there, the Hesleys had left, but they were found in the Morrison hotel.

Post office inspectors operating under Grant B. Miller, Post office Inspector in Charge at Chicago, visited Mokena last week and went over the mail bandit's route carefully. It is understood that the inspectors are now endeavoring to locate the person or persons who may have unwillingly carried the bandit from Larson's garage over the Lincoln highway to the Mokena road. The bandit had in his possession at the time he held up Dr. MacMahon the three small white canvas bags in which the money shipped by the Federal Reserve Bank had been enclosed in the registered mail, and he may also have had in his possession a small Boston bag. The bandit wore a dark brown or dark gray overcoat, with a rather fuzzy surface and a fedora hat, dark brown or dark gray, with a rather flat brim. Any person who may have seen or carried the bandit over the Lincoln highway should communicate immediately with Mr. Grant B. Miller, Post office Inspector in Charge, Chicago. It is understood that the Government pays liberal rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of mail robbers.

When the bandit left Joliet he had a small leather Boston bag. He did not have this when he held up the doctor as far as the latter noticed. It is probable he ditched this bag or threw it away.

If we had highway police such a thing as has happened could have been avoided. Illinois needs the mounted highway police system and needs it bad.

Regardless of the fact who the murderer is, the one cold fact remains that Walter Fisher is dead, his wife a widow and his children fatherless—and all for what?

Cow Testing Is Resumed In Will County

Despite the withdrawal of the state's indemnity fund for diseased cattle, farmers of eastern Will County are willing to have their dairy herds tested for tuberculosis and stand all losses, according to Dr. C. M. Faulkner of Manhattan authorized to make initial tests.

Dr. Faulkner is quoted as saying that more than 600 cows have been or will be submitted by their owners in this area for the test.

Dr. Faulkner will begin testing as soon as he receives his certificate. He says herd owners would sooner stand their own cattle losses than to be barred from the Chicago market.

Dr. John L. McEwan of Frankfort who has received his certificate to make first tests, is already in the field in the eastern part of the county.

Gas Mains To Reach New Lenox By May

By May New Lenox expects to be supplied with gas by the Western Gas and Electric Company of Joliet. This company has already laid gas mains up to the Frank Baumgartner dairy farm and expect to have the mains laid in the village of New Lenox by next month. The mains will be laid along the highway running by the Wilbur Francis farm to New Lenox.

The gas company has opened local headquarters in the John Urch hall where a sales and show room has been opened. Many gas stoves have been sold. George Nelson has also opened a gas stove agency in his garage for a Joliet gas stove dealer.

This progressive step is a big boom to New Lenox. Some months ago two petitions were put in circulation asking the gas company to extend their mains to New Lenox and 70 signers were secured on the both petitions who were ready to sign up for gas service and when these two petitions were turned over to the gas company they began this new service will be a big factor in the growth and upbuilding of New Lenox.

Bond Issue Carries At Tinley Park

An exceptionally heavy vote was polled at Tinley Park at the village election Tuesday. There were six candidates for aldermen, while the office of clerk had no opposition. The vote was as follows: for village trustees: John Breitharth 118; Selby Hirsch 66; Arthur Schoenbeck 83; Dick Bruening 182; Fred Hick 183; Wm. Fierchau 94. For village clerk, Harry Mager 197. Those elected are as follows: for clerk Harry Mager. For trustees John Breitharth, Dick Bruening and Fred Hick.

The special ballot on the issuance of $8000 bonds for improvement of water works system carried, the vote standing 201 for and 52 votes against the issue. A total of 261 votes was polled.

Dark Horses Figure In Orland Election

A number of dark horses trotted out at the last minute made things quite interesting at the Orland village election Tuesday. A total of 197 votes were cast. The first bit of excitement came in the morning when James Cannon who has been out of the state for over a year was chosen as one of the election judges, but when some of the voters declared the election would not be legal if he served as he has only been back in this state a few months, a new judge was chosen in his place.

There were four dark horse candidates running for aldermen in addition to three members of the board up for re-election. The vote stood as follows: candidates for re-election I. A. Cleveland 110; Geo. Yunker 71; W. R. Schuessler 59. Independent candidates Charles Haehnlein 96; Ben Hauss 59; Wm. Kollmann 70. Those elected are: Phillip E. Steffen, clerk no opposition 137 votes; for village trustees I. A. Cleveland, George Yunker and Chas. Haehnlein. John Creer also was in the race for trustee receiving 37 votes.

Mokena Village Election Quiet

The Mokena village election was a very tame affair Tuesday. All the old board members up for re-election were put over. The only flurry of excitement was when it became known that Aug. Hentsch was running for trustee on the independent ticket. But in voting on

Did He Act As Judge And Jury?

John F. Schultz, police magistrate and Police Chief John Frisch both of Mokena are eating a little war of their own just now. Last week Thursday Chief Frisch arrested two men and woman all of Blue Island on the road south of the Bowman plant in Mokena on the charge of being drunk. A bottle of booze was found on them, and Chief Frisch claims he destroyed it. Chief Frisch locked the trio up in the village jail and notified Police magistrate Schultz, but the latter claims Chief Frisch turned the trio lose without bringing them in court and feels that the chief acted as judge and jury in the case and this has aroused the ire of the police magistrate who says that it is no use for the voters to elect anyone to this office if the police chief can release prisoners at will.

Will And Cook County Expect More Hard Roads

Will County will have an opportunity to connect with many paved roads in Cook County under a plan suggested by Anton Cermak, president of the Cook County board of commissioners.

Cook County is planning to build paved roads 40 feet wide, asking that villages and towns pay for 20 feet of the paving in their township, while the county will pay the remainder.

Letters were sent out this week to 65 towns and villages in Cook county asking their co-operation in the road building projects.

If such a plan is adopted wide highways will lead from Chicago towards Mokena, Orland, Lemont and a number of other villages located near the Will-Cook County line.

Road boosters of Joliet suggest that the Maple road be paved and widened by Will County to link up with the paving project sponsored by Cook County and the state highway department.

Daniel Mast of Mokena Dies

Daniel Mast, aged 74 years and a resident of New Lenox township for 65 years, committed suicide by hanging himself in a barn on the farm of his son Clarence in New Lenox township at five o'clock this (Friday) morning. He had been in poor health and this is thought to have caused him to become despondent. He was born in Frankfort township in 1852. His wife died 16 years ago and for the past 4 years he has been living in Mokena. He is survived by one son Clarence of New Lenox township, two daughters Mrs. Alma Baker, Manhattan and Mrs. Cora Maue, Mokena and six grand children and other relatives. Funeral services will be held on Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the home of Clarence Mast in New Lenox township.

RETURN FROM FLORIDA

Mr. and Mrs. Don C. Hall who have been wintering in Florida are now in Austin, Indiana where they will remain for several weeks before returning to Mokena.

this ticket the voters made an error by writing his name in on the People's Ticket instead of on the independent ticket which resulted in this candidate's defeat as 48 of the ballots so marked were rejected by the election judges leaving only 28 good votes. Clifford Knudson, candidate for village clerk on the Peoples ticket was defeated by Karl E. Krapp on the Village Ticket by 10 votes. Krapp got 62 votes and Knudson 52. Those elected: clerk, Karl E. Krapp; trustees Albert Braun, Edward Sosenkel and Ona E. McGovney.

Mokena M. E. Starts Ep. League

The intermediates of the Mokena M. E. Sunday school were the guests of Rev. Glen T. Beatty at a party held at the church last Saturday night at which time an Epworth League was organized.

The officers of the League are as follows: Francis Moriarty, president; Velma Klose, Chairman of Spiritual Welfare; Francis Sorensen, Recreational chairman; Eloise Balaz, Pianist; Charles Hughes, Steward; Gerhard Barleywort, Secretary-Treasurer. Mrs. Wm. N. Lathrop is Counsellor and Miss L. Darling, Assistant Counsellor. The purpose or aim of the organization as adopted by the young folks is as follows: "To develop our lives to an appreciation of the best in life, by being more like Jesus in learning and study, in caring for our bodies and health, in loving and serving God, in our treatment of other people and in our play. To train ourselves, by study and doing, for efficient service in the church, the home, the school, the community, the nation, the world."

The first meeting of the Intermediate age-group Epworth League will be held Sunday evening at 6:30 p. m. Velma Klose is the leader for this meeting. All boys and girls of the approximate ages of 11, 12, 13 and 14 are invited to join this group of live-wires.

The pastor will preach on the subject "I Go a Fishing" at the 7:30 service. Invite your friends to worship with us. Standard time is observed here.

Time Changes Sun.

When you go to bed Saturday night be sure and set your clock or watch an hour ahead for the new time or Daylight Saving Time goes into effect at Saturday mid-night. Suburban trains will operate one hour earlier.

A balloon and confetti dance will be held at the St. Mary hall at Mokena. Music will be furnished by the Parisian Nighthawks orchestra of Mokena.

Mokena Lady Shakes Hand With Coolidge

Mrs. Emma Bechstein of Mokena had the honor and privilege of seeing President Calvin Coolidge and shaking hands with him at the White House at Washington one day last week. In letters and cards to Mokena friends, Mrs. Bechstein gives an interesting account of her visit to the White House and the Capitol and of the many other interesting government departments. She writes that President Coolidge looks just like his pictures in the papers.

While in Washington Mrs. Bechstein visited at the home of Mrs. Braun's brother who has played in the U. S. Marine band for thirty years and who will retire on $130 a month pension next month.

Mrs. Bechstein has been spending the winter in Florida with her cousins at St. Petersburg. She also made an auto trip thru Florida and saw many beautiful and interesting sights. From Florida she went to Washington and after sight seeing in the nation's capital, will return home this week.

Orland Bank Heads For $500,000 Class

It has long been the pet hobby of George E. Gee the genial cashier of the Orland State Bank to have the bank business reach the $500,000 mark and his aim is being brought to close realization of this mark for at the close of the day's business on Wednesday afternoon of this week the $410,000 mark had been reached. The Orland bank leads all the country banks in this section.

Lesson for April 25

THE STORY OF CAIN AND ABEL

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 4:1-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—Am I my brother's keeper?—Gen. 4:9.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Cain Quarrels with his Brother.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Cain Loses His Self-Control.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Jealousy and Anger Lead to.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Sin of Hate.

I. The Birth of Cain and Abel (vv. 1-2).

In obedience to God's command to multiply and replenish the earth, the first children were born into the world. In the birth of Cain Eve thought that the promise of Genesis 3:15 was in process of fulfillment, and exclaimed, "I have gotten a man from the Lord." Soon afterwards she gave birth to Abel. Both sons were born outside of Eden. It was after the fall of our first parents and their expulsion from Eden that they brought forth children in the likeness of their fallen nature. Through the law of heredity this stream of corruption has been flowing on from generation to generation.

II. The Respective Callings of Cain and Abel (v. 2).

Cain was a tiller of the ground and Abel a keeper of sheep. This shows that the primitive employment of man was agriculture and stock raising; in fact, before the fall, man's occupation was horticulture.

III. The Respective Offerings of Cain and Abel (vv. 3-4).

Both were worshipers; both brought offerings—Cain of the first-fruits of the ground and Abel of the firstlings of his flock. They both recognized God and His claims upon them. "The Lord had respect unto Abel and his offerings, but not unto Cain." Why this difference? Is God a respecter of persons? Was Abel better by nature than Cain? By no means, for there is no difference (Rom. 3:22). They both were born outside of Eden, therefore they both possessed the same depraved nature. The answer is given in Hebrews 11:4—"By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain." This leads us to the conclusion that God had taught the necessity of offering a bloody sacrifice, a vicarious substitute, that acceptance with Him was dependent upon the offering of a being apart from themselves as their substitute, which prefigured the atonement of Jesus Christ (Rom. 10:17).

IV. The Lord's Attitude Toward Their Offerings (vv. 4-11).

1. He accepted Abel's offerings (v. 4).

The reason for this acceptance was not because of Abel's goodness, but because he recognized his need as a sinner and by faith brought the sacrifice which represented the substitutionary offering of another in his stead (Heb. 11:4, Rom. 10:17).

2. He rejected Cain's offering (v. 5). This was not because of the moral badness of Cain, but because he in the energy of his self-will, brought the fruit of his own toil.

3. Cain rebuked (vv. 6, 7).

Cain, having sullenly resented the Lord's action, the Lord put a question of searching rebuke to him. As He extended His mercy to Cain, so He will give consideration to all who forsake their self-will and approach Him through the Lamb which was slain. The sin offering is lying at the door of everyone.

V. Cain Slays Abel (v. 8).

He showed hypocritical friendship for Abel (I John 3:2) to get a good chance to kill him. It is strange that the first murder grew out of the first recorded act of worship. This first murder was but a forecast of the oceans of blood which have been shed in the name of religion.

VI. God's Judgment Upon Cain (vv. 9-16).

Soon after Cain's sin, God asked Cain to account for Abel, his brother. Instead of confessing his guilt and suing for pardon, he tried to lie out of it, even answering God with defiance, disputing His right to bring him into judgment.

1. Unrequited toil.

The earth failed to respond in fruitfulness to Cain's toiling.

2. A degraded outcast.

He was condemned to perpetual exile.

3. Banished from the presence of God.

He not only was thrust out from home and society, but from the divine presence. Cain realized the greatness of his punishment, but showed no repentance of his sin.

4. God set a mark upon him.

Ford

Highest in Quality Lowest in Price

Ford cars are built throughout of the finest materials that can be produced. The very best steels available are used in Ford manufacture. The plate glass for windshields and windows is as perfect as can be made. Upholstery material contains a larger percentage of wool than is ordinarily specified—even for much higher priced cars. The basic features of Ford design have never been improved upon by any manufacturer.

No other car offers greater dependability. The Ford car has won the favor of millions of users under every conceivable motoring condition. Its convenience is known and appreciated the world over; its performance is taken for granted.

Such quality is possible at Ford prices because every operation, from mining of ore to final assembly, is under direct control of the Ford Motor Company.

Iron is taken from Ford mines in Michigan; coal from the Company's mines in Kentucky and West Virginia. Glass comes from Ford glass plants; wood from the Ford timber tracts in the North. Raw materials and finished products are carried over the Company's own transportation routes; coke ovens, blast furnaces, a steel mill, foundries and saw mills—all are part of this complete organization. There are even salvage plants, paper mill, cement plant, etc., to transform waste materials into useful by-products.

In this way every possible economy is effected. Under no other circumstances could Ford quality be had at Ford prices.

STORY OF VIRGINIA

By Evelyn Whitehead
Chapter I

One day Virginia's mother said "My dear you must go to school and be a good girl". On her way to school she saw a man coming near her. He said "Will you go with me? I will not hurt you." The girl thought she would like to know where she was going. So she started with him. Something told her not to go. But she went. They reached a house where there were many men. He took her into the house.

McCaulley Elected

School Director

The annual school election resulted in the victory of Louis McCaulley over L. J. Beidenkopf by 76 to 65. Both men stand high in the estimation of their fellow townsmen. Mr. Beidenkopf has served the public faithfully for a good many years and is perfectly willing to give way to younger blood if it is the wish of the public. Mr. McCaulley wishes to thank his friends for their support at the election.

BABY DAY MAY 2nd

We have long debated Mother's Day, Father's Day and Children's Day. The babies of the land have at last gained recognition in having a day of their own. May 2nd will be observed in Chicago and vicinity as "Baby Day."

The churches and Sunday schools will have special services in commemoration of this day and all organizations will aid in the celebration.

Let us remember that the babies of today are the fathers and mothers of tomorrow.

WORTH

Mrs. Husch, who has been suffering with a fractured limb, was taken to her home March 26th.

Mrs. Rosenbaum returned from the hospital March 26th and is somewhat improved.

Mr. H. C. Ferrin has been suffering with rheumatism.

Mrs. C. B. Bishop and Mary have recovered from the flu.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sanders, also Helen and Marie Sanders, Mr. and Mrs. L. Rayburn of Chicago, Prof. Hewitt of Evanston, Miss Rolle of Champaign, Mrs. D. L. Cradall of Spearman, S. Dak., and Miss Selma Baumier of Chicago were visitors for the re-opening of Church Sunday, April 4th.

Mrs. Frederick's sister Myrtle, who has been ill for the past month, was removed to the Cook County hospital April 9th.

Mr. Fred Foyle has returned from St. Louis but is still confined to his home.

Ruth Mitchell is now able to walk without her crutches and is now in Champaign visiting the pastor's mother.

Mrs. Wm. Leipstreff is suffering with quincy sore throat and vertigo has returned from the Burnside hospital and is greatly improved.

Mr. Louis McCaulley moved Rev. Palu T. Sanders' possessions from Evanston to Worth on March 26th. Mr. Sanders is now permanently located here and anyone wishing to see him may do so by calling at his home after 3 p. m.

Mr. Harry P. Woods is slowly recovering from an attack of the flu which has confined him to his home for the past three weeks.

The ladies of the church spent an entire day cleaning the church for the re-opening on April 4th. They scrubbed the floors upstairs and down, painted, put up drapes and in other words, made a general clean-up for which they are to be highly complimented.

Miss Gladys Crandall entertained the Everday Club at her home on April 8th. The girls will meet on April 22nd at the home of Hazel Stromberg.

SQUEEGE CLUB TO HAVE MOTOR LAUNCH

Great things are planned by the Squeeze Club for the coming sea-

boys expect to make trips every evening on the canal between Harlem Avenue Bridge and Blue Island, or west to Sag. With fine music lovely girls and beautiful scenery what more could be desired. When the young ladies were notified they simply bubbled over with enthusiasm. They feel that the long summer evening rides will furnish inspiration as well as enjoyment. Harriet will finish her novel "Blasted Hopes" soon to appear in "The Booster", Ruth knows that poetry will just ooze out of her, and Elsie, Minnie and Nellie are delighted. Imogene of course, is more than pleased, but she must not try any fancy diving, as the waters of the raging canal have a depressing effect on the olfactory nerve. Ethel and Margaret will sing "Little Doodle-Do Bug" and Hazel can recite "The Duck" and sing "Take Back your Gold" to the old man of the sea. Lillian can perform her favorite stunt, Gladys and Nellie can render some classics on the Baby Grande and the Jazz Orchestra will thrill the natives along the shore with melodious music.

A capable crew will be in control. Occasional trips will be made for the benefit of persons outside of this select circle. Purchase tickets if you can at Hildebrand's, Rust's, Tobey's, Bishop's or anywhere else your fickle fancy suggests, and failing all these go down to the dock and drop in. Husky life life guards will always be on hand to rescue the perishing. The boys wish to make everything as pleasant as possible and as Mr. Finnegan says, "Wat more d'yez want?"

Mr. Fred Foyle celebrated his 76th birthday at the home of his son, Bert on Saturday evening, April 10th.

ALPINE

Mrs. Lottie Smith of Scottsburg, Ind., was married in Chicago on April 12th, to Mr. F. A. Grove, of Alpine, Ill.

The wedding was a quiet affair attended by Mr. and Mrs. Peeler, son and daughter in law of the bride, also the daughter and a friend of the groom.

The bride wore a gown of blue trimmed in tan and looked very sweet and happy.

The groom wore a dark suit and was—well, like most grooms, happy.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bixler, childhood friends of the bride, gave a wedding supper in honor of the newly weds. They were assisted by their charming daughter, Creta and her chum, Helene Anderson. It is needless to say, the table was piled high with all kind of good things, especially, cakes.

All newly weds are charivariated this was no exception, and after the din, clamor, bangs, crashes and clatter had subsided, Mr. Bixler opened the doors of his large home to the crowd. After this cigars and candy were passed.

A party was then started in which square and round dances were enjoyed by about 50 of the guests and many other games were played. The new Mrs. Grove was in this way introduced to her new neighbors. The party continued into the wee small hours of the morning and after all had a good time, well wishes and good nights were in order and the party ended.

Mr. and Mrs. Grove have gone to housekeeping in the groom's old home in Orland, Ill., until their new home is completed.

ANOTHER RECORD FOR AMERICAN INITIATIVE

Associated Press dispatches of March 30, stated that a radiophone message had been completed with perfect satisfaction from Rugby, England, to a private telephone subscriber in Chicago. This meant 2900 miles of circuit through the air and then connection over the telephone company wires to Chicago.

The call was put through by Arthur A. Oswald of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, who designed and built the Rugby radio-telephone station. The connection on this side of the water was made just as any long distance circuit would be connected, the operators having no idea that they were making telephone history. Officials of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company state, however that their wires are not equipped at present to put through such calls even in cases of great emergency, unless conditions are just right.

It has again remained for the American telephone system to demonstrate its supremacy and initiative in extending its fields of public service, in advance of the demands of even the wildest dreams of its patrons. While the present call was largely experimental, it shows the ends to which the company intends to go in rendering not only a national, but an international service.

World's Greatest

"Ben-Hur" Filmed at expense of $4,000,000. On view only at Woods Theatre—Chicago.

"Ben-Hur" with its magnificent chariot race, which was ever the wonder of the speaking stage, is renewed again in all its glory of thrills and romance at the Woods Theatre, Chicago, where it is now entering its third month of phenomenal business.

All the features of General Lew Wallace's wonderful "Tale of the Christ" are presented with the super-art of the motion picture camera. Twelve teams of four horses each bear Hur to victory just as they did when the stage presentation was made. The Roman and Pirate Navies contend in realistic death grips in the Mediterranean. The exquisite Madonna The Last Supper, The Procession of the Palms, and the beautiful love story of Ben-Hur and Esther dominate the spectacle which is characterized by a fine reverence in the treatment of the various themes. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Charles Dillingham and Florenz Ziegfeld have made "Ben-Hur" out-top all former achievements, through the process of film wizardry.

Among the leading actors are Ramon Novarro in the title role; Francis X. Bushman as Messala; May McAvoy as Esther; Betty Bronson as the Madonna; Carmel Myers as Iras; Frank J. Currier, Mitchell Lewis, Nigel de Brulier, Claire McDowell, Kathleen Key with no less than 15,000 persons in "Support."

"Ben-Hur" cost Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer $4,000,000, and it was money well spent. By the unanimous opinion of those who have seen the production, it is the world's greatest show. The same perfect projection and musical accompaniment by big orchestra as are used at the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York, mark the Woods presentation which is given twice daily at 2:30 and 8:30. Mail orders addressed to the Manager, Woods Theatre, Chicago, Ill., are promptly filled in the order of their receipt. The prices are 50c to $2 evenings, 50c to $1.50 Saturday and holiday Matinees, and 50c to $1 at all other matinees including Sundays. In making out their checks, patrons are requested to add 10 per cent U.S. Government Tax to the prices of tickets higher than 50c.

MOKENA

The postponed supper of the Ladies Aid Society of St. John Evangelical church will be held in the basement of the church on Wednesday April 28th. Bunco will be played after the supper.

Mrs. Lawrence Kohl who has been in Silver Cross hospital the past several weeks with her little 11 months old son, Marvin, who has been very ill, returned to her home with the baby, who is about the same.

A bakery sale was conducted by St. John's Ladies Aid in the church basement, Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Mary Marti entertained the 500 club at her home Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Schmuhl and George Maue who have spent the winter in Florida, have returned to their homes.

Edwin Hirsch who underwent an operation recently on his throat, is improving nicely.

Grandpa Barnes is improving nicely from a recent illness at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Frank Vally.

At the regular Parent-Teacher meeting held in the school house the second Tuesday in April, Mrs. W. N. Lathrop was chosen delegate to attend the State meeting to be held in Springfield April 26 and 27. Plans were also made for a banquet to be given May 11th. A report of the dance given for the Association by the Tonn Synopators, showed $53.40 cleared. This sum made up the last payment of the motion picture machine.

Supt. August Maue was present and gave a pleasing talk. Also Mr. Flaherty of Manhattan was present.

Mrs. Geo. Rinke and daughter the later being seriously ill in St. Joseph hospital for several weeks, returned home Sunday. The baby is improving nicely.

A large number of Mokena friends tended the hard time dance given in Manhattan Friday night by the Manhattan public school.

A large number of Mokena friends attended the funeral of Walter Fisher in Chicago last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Kraus are nicely settled in their new home which they recently purchased from Chas. Hacker.

Martin Muehler Mokena Meat Dealer, is remodeling his market and residence, by putting on a new roof and laying a new foundation.

I snatched up my musket from the pirogue and fired at the first man to break through the bushes. I shouted for Narbonne to take the girl along in his pirogue, and then called on Six Fingers to follow me. With a leap I struck the edge of the bank and went down on all fours. A Choctaw tripped on my head and pitched into the water. The darkness served to hamper the red men once I was among them. I discharged one pistol, the second missing fire, and pulled my ax. Somewhere in the background Damoan was shouting encouragement to the Indians, and I tried to get to him, knowing that once he was down his allies would lose heart.

During the first minute of the confusion only Damoan's high voice was to be heard. Then came mademoiselle's voice, crying:

"I wait for monsieur."

And I knew she had refused to put off with Narbonne and leave me. The next moment Narbonne was at my side, and I surmised that Six Fingers had refused to follow me.

"Hein! Good thrust!" cried Narbonne as he placed his back to mine and scored.

"Fall back and throw your axes!" yelled Damoan in Choctaw.

But as the Indians gave ground we pressed forward. I warned Narbonne to drop flat just in time to escape the axes which now whirled over our heads. After the first volley of axes we were up again, and what with the night and our constant shifting of position this mode of attack was not persisted in.

A brave yell against me, one arm still raised and holding a knife. I caught him as he would have slipped to the ground, and holding him before me rushed forward a few yards. Narbonne followed close behind me, his long sword playing on the flanks; and inside of sixty seconds we had advanced a score of feet from the bank and had good clearance room.

"Rush them with your knives!" flumed Damoan.

"Ho, you, Frenchman! Stand out and do your own fighting!" mocked Narbonne.

Back across the bayou Six Fingers was yelling.

"Don't shoot, mademoiselle! I go!" I came near to braining him as he gained my side, a shriveled, withered spider of a creature. One of his vile pirate oaths identified him before my ax could end his unsavory existence.

He came in the nick of time, and if I have belittled him as a man, and if he was loath to risk his hide until compelled, I had to acknowledge his worth as a fighting machine once he entered the fray. Almost under my feet and hard to discern he darted his knife in and out and croaked horrible words.

For a bit the Choctaws actually gave ground before our desperate onrush, and I began to fear Damoan would steal around the flanks and capture the girl. It was a relief to hear his voice and to know he was still behind his warriors.

A knife ripped my forearm, and I cracked the fellow's skull. Narbonne was shouting:

"Who wants any Mississippi? Ten thousand shares for eighteen thousand livres! Diamonds overnight, and a heavenly crown!"

He broke off, panting for breath and laughing hysterically.

It was time to rush back to the bayou, for we were surely done for if we advanced farther from the pirogues. Narbonne began coughing and I knew he was wounded although he kept his feet. Six Fingers began a stanza of an evil song, gave a screech and went down between my feet.

"Back to the canoes!" I cried to Narbonne. "Get the girl away if you can while I stand them off."

It was our one opportunity to retreat without being thrust through the back; for either the Choctaws were for the moment dismayed at their lack of success, or else they had sensed Narbonne's madness, and were now drawing off and ignoring Damoan's frantic exhortations to continue the attack.

I scooped up Six Fingers under my arm and minded his weight no more than if he had been a child. Narbonne, still coughing, gave ground and kept at my side.

"Faster!" I urged, as I heard the Indians rallying for a rush.

To my alarm he began wasting his breath by crying:

"Who takes some of Monsieur L'as' Mississippi? Who takes golden Mississippi, indorsed by Monsieur le Regent? From the Banque Royale to the Indian company and then back to the banque. Va au diable! We will let out some of your selfishness!"

And to my horror he turned and ran back through the darkness to meet the charging enemy, coughing and calling out mad words.

I was now at the bayou, and the girl was screaming in terror. Six Fingers was limp, yet breathing. To go after my poor friend was out of the question, as it was only a matter of seconds before I too should be renewing the fighting. Whether he intended it or not there was great virtue in Narbonne's madness, for the Choctaws yelled loudly when he struck their line, and doubtless they believed the three of us were on them again. He held up their advance for a bit before they could get the truth straight in their minds. A faint voice behind me called:

"Qui est la?"

"Brampton. Get into the canoe."

"Grace a Dieu!" he choked.

I too thanked God to have the mad fellow back. I knew he must be seriously, possibly mortally wounded, by the way he staggered and bumped against me. With Six Fingers in my arms I could not lend him assistance. But what was amazing was the fact that the howling of the Choctaws did not come nearer, nor did Damoan cease his shouting although it was impossible to decipher what he said because of the din. And what were the devils yowling about?

From directly ahead of me came mademoiselle's voice, surprisingly steady for one who had been so busily screaming; and she was demanding:

"Who is it?"

"Brampton. We are all here. Into the pirogue! Can you manage a paddle till we get out of this hell?" I asked Narbonne.

The half-smothered voice answered in the affirmative. I dropped Six Fingers into a canoe and scooped a hatful of water on his head. I turned to join mademoiselle in my pirogue, still wondering why the Choctaws should remain aloof and keep up their hideous yelling, and a splash told me my friend had fallen into the water. I caught him by the shoulder and pulled him to the side of my pirogue and received the surprise of my life to find his arms were tightly drawn behind his back and bound with a thong.

I was no believer in fairy stories, but how could he enter a fight, be trussed up and then escape without his captors giving pursuit? It was beyond my comprehension unless I explained it by magic. As I frantically worked over the rawhide cords mademoiselle attempted to aid me, and she cried:

"God help us! His mouth!"

I finished with his hands and felt of his face and found new cause for astonishment. A cord, like a gag, ran from his mouth to the back of his head, cutting the corners of his mouth, and making speech very difficult.

"Had me gagged, tied," he faintly mumbled. "Got rid of gag. Couldn't slip the cord. Don't you know me?"

"Know you?" I began, sadly shaken at the poor fellow's experience. And I commenced lifting him into the pirogue, for until now he had been standing up to his waist in water. Then from the bush, back where the savages were still yowling, came Narbonne's mad voice shouting:

"Ten thousand shares! Twenty thousand livres! Who wants any Mississippi? Immortality!"

I had my man by the throat as he came over the side of the pirogue, and my ax was over his head, as I gritted:

"Who in the fiend's name are you?"

"Joe Labrador, old friend! Don't you know me?" he gasped. Then the Choctaws raised their scalp-cry, and there was no more sound of fighting.

CHAPTER X

Lifting the Peace Pipe.

We were unmolested in our escape from the cut-off, and although forced to land by another barrier of drift the carry was short, and in the bright sunshine we continued our journey. Damoan, so long as he did not intercept us in the cut-off, would be compelled to return to his pirogues and lose much time in completing the loop. The girl slept much of the morning, and Labrador and I stuck to the paddles till late in the afternoon, when we were forced to give up.

Aided by the Canadian I soon had the pirogues cunningly concealed and had chosen a retired hollow where we could rest and eat. Labrador caught some fish while I examined Six Fingers' wound—a clout over the head which would soon mend. I had had no time for an explanation from Labrador until now.

"Damoan the Fox came to la Nouvelle Orleans in the night," he began. "He had an order from Sieur de Bienville for all to aid him in his search for the White Indian. Damoan selected me to go with him and his Choctaws. The Fox took pirogues and started up the river, leaving orders for more Choctaws to follow him when they arrived from Biloxi. When we passed the Iberville I saw my friend drop in the bush."

"The Indians were busy with their paddling and watching the bank ahead and saw nothing. Damoan thought he saw something, but was not sure. I led to him and said there was nothing. Afterward he grew suspicious and sent back a canoe. We camped on the big loop, waiting for more Choctaws to come up. Something held them back, for they had not come up when the fight began. Damoan is a devil. He reads men's minds, as a red tracker reads a trail. Without warning, just before the fight at the bayou began, he had me seized, my hands tied and a gag put in my mouth. Then came the arrows and the war-cry of the Natchez. Monsieur knows about the fight. Damoan kept close beside me till toward the end. Then the mad Frenchman charged the Indians. Damoan then had to leave me, for his Indians were saying the madman was led by his manito; and they would have run away from him if not for the Fox. I got rid of the gag but not the cord. I ran away and found monsieur. That is all."

"Poor Monsieur Narbonne!" softly cried mademoiselle. "He was a gallant Frenchman."

"He went down gloriously, mademoiselle," said Labrador.

Narbonne's death affected me strongly. He had made my fight his fight. I could not bring myself to use the friendship of another Frenchman in furthering my schemes; and to Labrador I said:

"Friend Joe, I am an English spy."

"Eh bien! Damoan the Fox is not. I prefer you to him. You'll not hurt France, monsieur. And perhaps I have spied a bit on the English. Who knows? We are even, and our friendship stands. There is but one thing to remember; you are doing mademoiselle a service. I must help."

Six Fingers was sullenly silent. Narbonne's death deprived him of his chance to visit golden Acanibas. His trend of thought was revealed in his shriveled face as he slowly turned his gaze on the girl. I remembered his talk about a choice between two gold mines. One was Acanibas. But how could mademoiselle be connected with the second? Friendless and without money how could she attract the cupid of this old scoundrel?

That night I divided the watch with Labrador, and with the first light had fish cooked and my companions awakened to eat and take to the pirogues. From the shore we could see a long stretch of the lonely waters, and no canoes were in sight.

We worked our fastest until midday, when we paused while Labrador slipped ashore and shot a deer. Then on we went for two weary hours when we landed again and cooked a generous quantity of the meat. I was pleased to see that mademoiselle ate the steak with a relish.

To relieve her of Six Fingers' presence I ordered him to take his ration out on a point of rock and keep watch over the lower river. Labrador was the most care-free of the four of us, and essayed his best to lighten the girl's sad mood. Her thoughts were with Narbonne, however, and the sacrifice he had made for her sake. Once I sought to divert her thoughts by asking why she feared Six Fingers.

She scornfully answered:

"That scum of the earth! Let him beware, or I'll have him whipped." This was high language.

"Then you do not fear him?" I urged.

"Bah! I only fear for what he—"

She came to a stop and eyed me suspiciously. I believed she had started to say she feared him only for what he knew. She recovered her composure and signified her readiness to continue the journey.

Late that afternoon we landed again, and Labrador climbed a tree. He had startling news. Three pirogues, well filled, were far down the river. We both were satisfied that Damoan had received reinforcements. We had planned to pass through the portage of the Cross, thus avoiding the immense loop of the Three channels, but as night was near and the enemy in sight, and inasmuch as we could not hope to keep ahead of the fresh paddlers Damoan always could supply, we went ashore.

Six Fingers rebelled against leaving the river, but Labrador saved me from using him severely by glibly telling stories about the riches apt to be found among the Indians. Among other lies he solemnly declared the Humas hung golden circlets around their ankles and wrists. Six Fingers made no objections after hearing these absurdities. There was a venomous lustre in his eyes as the Canadian elaborated on his first description of the brass ornaments worn by the savages. We concealed the pirogues most skillfully, and I found a well-trodden Indian trail that led inland and would leave no trace of our passing.

To make good our isolation from any prowling Choctaws we passed that night in the thick woods, the deer meat brought along by Labrador doing us for food. Early in the morning I went a short distance from our camp and killed two wild turkeys with a long stick. I had them dressed and on broiling by the time mademoiselle in her tiny bark house came out and went to a nearby stream to bathe.

She came back with a new expression illuminating her face, something of fresh hope, of a faith in the morrow; the result of getting away from the river, perhaps. When I stole a glance at her piquant face I could only think of the jessamine and the opening magnolia buds back home.

"Labrador," I said, "suppose you scout about us and see if you find any Choctaw signs. We will wait here. Six Fingers, go to the brook and look for a gourd left there by the Indians, and bring me some water."

Six Fingers went willingly enough, his belief in gold to be found in running streams making the errand most welcome. Labrador was loath to depart, but mademoiselle gave him a smile to carry with him, and he plunged into the thicket. Now we two were alone she grew restrained in her manner, almost as if wishing at least Labrador was back with us.

For three years I had followed the river with but few glimpses of white women except as I saw them in Canada or on the gulf. And many of these, especially those on the gulf, were without sex in my eyes, so desperate had been Beau Law's company to secure colonists. Before me sat mademoiselle, cross-legged like an Indian squaw, yet ravishingly enticing in her appeal. Her demure youth held the threat of conquest, once spontaneous fires were kindled in her heart. Notwithstanding all this, what I proposed saying was in no way meant to take any advantage of her position, but was prompted by an impulse to shield her after she reached Virginia.

Without any preamble I said:

"Mademoiselle, when you reach the English settlements questions will be asked you. You cannot avoid them. You can scarcely escape answering them. Your position will be unpleasant. Do you care to tell me just what you propose doing?"

"I will work," she muttered, staring down at the ground and digging her slim fingers into the forest-mold.

"Work is honorable, but in some English colonies slaves do the work, or indentured servants. Work is honorable for a wife, however."

"I am not a wife," she softly said.

"You shall be, if you care to say the word," I promptly declared. "Nay, do not be alarmed. I shall never bring this matter up again. I make you this offer to relieve your mind of any anxiety. As my wife you will not be questioned, nor will you have to labor with slaves and indentured servants."

Up came her head, her gaze haughtily returning mine. In a low even voice she coldly informed me:

"When I found my faith at the brook, I also found some of my pride. Monsieur has made a great mistake."

"I am afraid I have," I muttered, dazed by the unexpected outcome of what cool reason would tell me was an unwise honor.

But what the devil had pride to do with it? In a rush of memory I saw her standing wan and friendless on the sands of Ship Island. I remembered her misrepresentation of how she came to sail for Louisiana. I recalled my conviction that soft hands and poverty were a poor dowry for a girl to bring to one not assured as to her history. And I had actually offered her marriage under the spell of the morning and because of a vagrant impulse to complete her belief in her medicine—her faith.

Human Ruminants Not Unknown to History

The first case of a human ruminant reported in a scientific journal was that of Robert Gill, a cobbler of Dorsetshire, whose death was reported in the British Annual Register under date of October 1, 1737.

In ancient times and in the Middle Ages men who chewed the cud were apparently very far from rare, but modern science would be prone to dismiss such tales were they not supported by evidence of more recent time. Roger Gill died after suffering "great tortures" due to the loss of his strange faculty.

Gill usually began his second chewing a quarter or half an hour, sometimes later, after dinner, when every morsel came up successively sweeter and sweeter to the taste. The chewing continued about an hour or more, and sometimes would leave him for a little while, "in which case he would be sick at his stomach." Many other and later instances might be cited of men who have been "brother to the ox" in the possession of this faculty.—Chicago Journal.

Historic London Church

The Church of St. Michael, one of Wren's churches, which has just been reopened after extensive renovations, is one of the most historic churches in London. It is built on the site of that erected by Dick Whittington, and in which he was buried, but the original was so entirely wiped out in the great fire that no trace of Sir Richard Whittington's grave now remains. The renovation scheme included the painting of the walls and ceiling, and the moving of the heavy altar railing forward to form a choir screen. The representations of Moses and Aaron found in all Wren's churches are in this case exquisite statues which formerly stood on pedestals beside the altar. They have now been accommodated in niches in the walls some few feet above their original location.

Poetry Restored

Let poetry once more be restored to her ancient truth and purity; let her be inspired from heaven, and, in return, her incense ascend thither; let her exchange her low, venal, trifling subjects for such as are fair, useful, and magnificent; and let her execute these so as at once to please, instruct, surprise and astonish; and then, of necessity, the most inveterate ignorance and prejudice shall be struck dumb, and poets yet become the delight and wonder of mankind.—James Thomson.

When Grandmother Was a Girl

Since 1867

Styles have changed a lot since grandmother was a girl. The curls and frills and ruffles and furbelows of that bygone day are only a memory now.

But there is one fashion that has remained in vogue during all these years—that has, as a matter of fact, increased amazingly in popularity since 1867. That is the fashion of home decorating with paint products bearing the label of The Chicago White Lead and Oil Co. This label signified highest quality then—just as it does today. And of the complete line of half-century-old favorites, none is better known than King Wall Finish.

For this remarkable finish combines all the desirable features anyone can ask for. It's easy to prepare by simply mixing with hot water. It's easy to apply, even by an amateur who has never held a paint brush, for it never spots, laps or streaks. And it is so economical that you can finish the average size room for less than $1.00!

"Smokeless" Soft Coal

An invention is being tried out to make soft coal burn without emitting any considerable quantity of smoke. By first thoroughly wetting the coal, even of the cheapest grade, and then burning it under a forced draught, it is said much of the smoke is eliminated. The coal thus burned is said to be more efficient as the smoke represents a waste of carbon. More air helps combustion.

Says Dangerous Varicose Veins Can Be Reduced at Home

Rub Gently and Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way.

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or bunches, the best advice that anyone in this world can give you is to ask your druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you will notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are of normal size. So penetrating and powerful is Emerald Oil that even files are quickly absorbed.

TWO HOMES MADE HAPPY

By Women Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I think it is the most wonderful medicine I ever tried," is the statement made by Mrs. Goldie Shoup of May View, Illinois. She declares that after taking the Compound she is in better health than before.

Mrs. J. Storms of 29 Lane Street, Paterson, N. J., writes: "I can not speak too highly of your medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

These statements were taken from two enthusiastic letters which tell of the help that has been received from using the Vegetable Compound. Both Mrs. Shoup and Mrs. Storms were in a run-down condition which caused them much unhappiness. When women are suffering from lack of strength and from weakness, their own life and that of their family is affected. When they feel well and strong and are able to do their housework easily, happy homes are the result.

Thousands of testimonial letters have been received from women in different walks of life, stating that the Compound has helped them.

NELLIE REVELL Says:

FIVE years of watching the world go by me as I stop by the roadside to let the medico-mechanics tinker with my trick spine have taught me many things that I should never have believed before. No longer able to put things over, I have been constrained to think them over and, as thinking is about the only thing the doctors haven't forbidden me, I have done a lot of it.

The result of these "thinking tours" has been the knowledge that I am much better off, far happier than I was before I was forcibly enrolled for membership in this university of hard knocks, where I have been taking a post-graduate course. In it I have learned many lessons I could never have grasped during health and prosperity.

I have learned that friendship is like the show business where one genuine success makes up for half a dozen failures. I have learned that the natural tendency of human nature is toward kindness and helpfulness. I have learned that the world is not half as selfish as the cynics would have us believe. I have learned that the world's greatest gift is love, and that love is only the poet's word for friendship.

My tuition in this school has been paid in blood, tears and scars. The courses have been long, tedious and painful. But the results are soul-satisfying, for I made every grade, learned my lessons well, did not flunk a single examination and would not exchange my degree for one from any other college on earth.

If this physical, mental and financial suffering was the price I had to pay for the restoration of my confidence in humanity and my freshened attitude toward life, then I am not only ahead of the game, but I have been guilty of profiteering.

William Grossman, the attorney, came to see me recently, chuckling over a joke he had just heard on a noted jurist. The judge, he said, pointed out to his court that a witness was not necessarily to be regarded as untruthful because he altered a previous statement.

"As an instance," he declared, "when I entered this courtroom today I would have said under oath I had my watch with me. But later I recalled I had left it at home on my dresser."

When the judge returned home that evening, his wife asked: "Why were you so worried about your watch—sending five men for it?"

"Great grief!" said the judge, "what did you do?"

"I gave it to the first man who came; he knew just where it was."

Harry Grant, auditor of the Orpheum circuit of theaters, is as good at telling stories as he is at handling figures, and he is known as one of the best financial men in the theatrical industry. So whenever he comes to visit me I get out my pencil and pad and sigh with relief for I know my column is going to be easier to fill that week. On his last call he had one to tell of the young man who had succeeded his deceased father as president of a small railroad in the Southwest. The old man had been heartily disliked for he had worked his employees and his road to the last gasp and the new president on his first inspection trip found the equipment in bad shape. Toward evening his special stopped at a division point and he got out. As he walked alongside his private car he met a grizzled old "car tink" who was busy tapping the car wheels with his little hammer.

"What do you think of the car?" the president inquired.

"Good enough for the rails it rides on," was the ambiguous reply.

"Well, how about the rails?"

"Rotten."

"Listen here," said the young man, "do you know who I am?"

"Sure. You're the president. And I knew your father when he was president and he's going to be president again."

"What do you mean? Don't you know my father's dead?"

"Yep," the old-timer nodded. "I know he's dead. And the road's going to hell, too."

Irving Southard, who has replaced the late and much-beloved Billy Stuart as chief of the consolation bureau of the National Vaudeville Artists' club, has neglected his education in so far as the meaning of "diet" is concerned. One week he arrived with a box of candy made by Mrs. Southard. When I explained that I was not allowed to indulge in sweets he waved my scruples off of existence with a single lordly gesture.

"Nonsense," he told me; "that's good, pure, homemade candy and there isn't a thing in it that will hurt you. It's just maple sugar, butter and good, rich cream."

Arthur Caesar, play reader in William Harris' office, is wondering why Will Shakespeare wrote so few plays. Not long ago a man with long gray whiskers and a wildly wandering eye, burst into his sanctum and demanded: "How many plays did Shakespeare write?"

"Thirty-nine or forty," replied Mr. Caesar, hazarding a very rough guess.

"Well," declared the visitor, "I'm just nine times greater as a dramatist than Shakespeare. I've written 365 plays."

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

(© 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

THEN AND NOW

THOSE of us who write about better health and less disease always have to write with one eye on the reader and one on the editor. For we know that unless what we write gets past the editor it will never get to the reader. So it is always not only very desirable but also absolutely necessary to know just what the editor thinks about all this "health stuff."

Every once in a while, in every profession, whether it's doctors or lawyers or ministers or editors, somebody forgets all about professional prejudices and habits and talks right out in meeting. And it's always not only refreshing but also enlightening, for then you know you're hearing the facts just as they appear to a man who knows what he is talking about.

So when the editor of the Worcester Gazette frees his mind, you know you are getting it straight. Here is what he says:

"Once upon a time and not so long ago:

"Everybody drank from the same glass in a railway coach.

"A roller towel in the hotel wash-room accommodated all comers.

"Thousands of people died every year from typhoid fever.

"The health officer's chief job was to inspect alleys and back yards for garbage and dead animals and to order chloride of calcium scattered about.

"The state board of health existed principally for the purpose of examining and licensing physicians.

"There were flies in every dining room.

"Nobody took a bath until Saturday night.

"Lots of people thought that wearing asafetida would prevent diphtheria and smallpox.

"Red flannel underwear was all the rage.

"Consumption was an incurable disease and folks who had it were advised to drink a great deal of whisky or go West, or do both."

Now there isn't a single medical term in this editorial. It's simply the everyday things the editor has seen and remembered that are different now from what they were then and where any sensible person can see there has been a change for the better.

What's the reason? Largely, as HealthyHome suggests, because newspapers are giving increasing space today to information about health and disease, how to keep one and avoid the other.

FEWER DRUG ADDICTS

IN THE fifteen years since the so-called Harrison law was passed by congress, many sensational statements have appeared from time to time regarding the number of persons in the country who were regular and habitual users of the so-called narcotic drugs. It has been claimed that there were from one to ten million persons who were victims of these drug habits and that the number was increasing. Equally sensational stories of the capture of immense quantities of these drugs, of the methods by which they were sold and the enormous amounts made by these "dope peddlers" have added to the popular idea that we were in danger of becoming a nation of "drug fiends." Yet when you ask any individual how many persons he knows who use any of these drugs you generally find that his impressions are gained largely from hearsay.

There is and has been for many years, a drug addict problem, but it is not today and never has been as great or as widespread as has been generally believed. In contrast to the many sweeping statements made on this subject, let us set a carefully prepared report of an official body of experts.

The conference of state and provincial health authorities of North America is a yearly gathering made up of one representative, generally the executive secretary, from each of the state health boards and departments. At their last meeting, a committee on drug addiction reported that the use of opium and cocaine was declining. The federal and state laws restricting their sale were being better enforced and as a result the number of drug users was being decreased. Drug addiction, said the committee, was still serious but not as bad as had been represented. The most careful survey made under the United States public health service, showed that there were about 110,000 persons in this country who habitually used opium, morphine, or cocaine, or some form of cocaine. Heroin, the most dangerous of all the opium preparations, has been practically wiped out and its manufacture stopped.

So at the worst, less than one-tenth of one per cent of the people in this country are narcotic drug users. This is one out of a thousand.

Physicians do not prescribe as much as formerly. They do not order opium as freely. People do not take as much medicine and dangerous medicines are not as easy to get as they were twenty years ago.

The Knowledge of God

By REV. JOHN C. PAGE
Teacher of Bible Doctrine, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT.—God is light.—I John 1:5. God is love.—I John 4:16.

Among all the objects of human knowledge possible to man, a true conception of God is foremost in importance. Our knowledge of God may be obtained from nature and the Bible. A knowledge of God derived from nature only is insufficient to meet human need. In addition to the fact of God, the human heart cries out to know who or what He is. The answer to this cry is found only in the supernatural revelation contained in the Bible. We may sing the praises of nature when the skies are clear and the storms of life are far removed from us, but when the shadows gather and the darkness falls upon us, the broken heart of man is not healed by the balm of nature.

Rev. John C. Page.

To the heathen world God is a being of power and vengeance. To the cultured Greek mind God stood for the forces of nature transformed into superhuman men and women. To some philosophers He is a mere abstraction, but to the apostle who had known in familiar companionship and reverent affection the Son of God, the Deity is presented in the words of our text, "God is light," and "God is love."

No figure borrowed from the material world could give the idea of absolute holiness and purity so clearly and fully as light. In the physical world light stands for splendor and glory. In the realm of thought it stands for truth, and in the realm of morals it indicates purity and holiness. Light is self-revealing and is defiled by nothing. It is the condition of life and growth and beauty. It is the nature of light to communicate itself with life-giving and purifying power and to pervade everything it touches. God is light, excellency without limit and without taint. No other figure could convey to the mind such a conception of the nature of God.

Together with the conception conveyed by the statement that "God is light," we need to consider the other statement that "God is love." The order in which these two appear is quite suggestive. First, God is light—then, God is love. The one is the complement of the other. When the Bible declares that God is love it does not mean that He is indulgent or tolerant of evil. Such a conclusion would be contradictory to the other statement that God is light. He cannot look upon sin or wrongdoing except with disfavor, nor can He do anything with our sin except to condemn and punish it. This was done at Calvary. "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins." The love of God is not primarily associated with His daily gifts, which we receive and enjoy in the ordinary things of life, but rather is associated with our redemption. In order to redeem us a propitiation must be provided. God's acts are always consistent with His own nature. The requirements of His holy character and of His righteous law which we had broken could be met only in the propitiation that Christ made at the cross. What God's righteousness required God's love provided.

Too many people today disassociate these two statements of the nature and character of God. They emphasize the fact that God is love to the exclusion of the other fact that God is light. Not only are both of these necessary to right thinking concerning God, but the order in which they appear is also important. The atoning work of Jesus Christ finds its first and greatest necessity in the holiness of God. That holiness required that sin should be judged, condemned and punished. This was done when the Lord laid on Him the iniquity of us all. The One upon whom our iniquity was laid met every liability incurred in our transgression and discharged our obligations. As the apostle contemplates this, he explains with wonder and joy, "Herein is love."

Where Duty Lies
We are all preaching sermons to our fellows by our lives. And, perhaps, those are the greatest sermons. A man who had made the great decision for Christ once came to the late Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon, desiring the great preacher to find him some church work. "What is your trade?" Inquired the great preacher. "An engine driver, sir," was the reply. "Is the stoker a Christian?" asked Mr. Spurgeon. "No," responded the other, "Very well, then," was Spurgeon's characteristic rejoinder, "there's your church work, brother!" By our lives we may commend our Saviour to those around us.

The Gospel
The Gospel is no Gospel if it does not turn the hearts of men toward each other, as well as toward God. It is no Gospel if it does not unite all believers in wise, well-considered and earnest movements for the cleansing of the world and the better ordering of all human life.—Charles Gordon Ames.

Weak Humanity

It is as difficult to get a man to admit that he smokes as it is to get a woman to admit her age.

ORLAND

Mr. and Mrs. Setterlund and family and Mr. Lind, were Sunday dinner guests at the Chas. Cooper home. In addition to them other guests were, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Cooper and children. Later in the day, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Sayers and son.

Mr. Robert Murdock and Mr. Tutwiler from Chicago were week end guests at Orland. Mr. Murdock assisted in the work of the choir and led the singing, both at Sunday school and the evening service.

Mrs. Betsy Austin has been ill for the past week, but is slowly improving.

Who takes some of Monseigneur L'as Mississippi? Who takes golden Mississippi, indorsed by Monsieur le Regent? From the Banque Royale to the Indian company and then back to the banque. Va au diable! We will let out some of your selfishness!

And to my horror he turned and ran back through the darkness to meet the charging enemy, coughing and calling out mad words.

I was now at the bayou, and the girl was screaming in terror. Six fingers was limp, yet breathing. To go after my poor friend was out of the question, as it was only a matter of seconds before I too should be renewing the fighting. Whether he intended it or not there was great virtue in Narbonne's madness, for the Choctaws yelled loudly when he struck their line, and doubtless they believed the three of us were on them again. He held up their advance for a bit before they could get the truth straight in
